NATIONAL FAMILY LITERACY MONTH

National Family Literacy Month is an annual designation observed in November. This month, get the whole family snuggled up on the couch and open up a good book. Studies show that reading aloud with mom or dad is the most important activity when it comes to preparing children to read on their own. And if you raise a good reader... Pretty much anything is possible! Reading helps with vocabulary, writing skills, attention span, memory, and teaches us about other times and places. Even if your child is just a baby, you should still sit down and read with them every once in a while. An infant can look at pictures and listen to your voice as you read stories to them... And believe it or not, studies show that alone can have a profound effect on your child when it comes to learning later on in life. Grab a few books, gather the fam, snuggle up, and let a book take you all to another place together.

Get the whole family together and enjoy some reading. If you are reading to toddlers or other young children, try to remember when you were young, and the way you liked listening to your parents or teachers read with excitement in their voice, and when they gave you enough time to look at the pictures as well as listening to the words.

Here are a few ways to participate in National Family Literacy Month.

- Set aside a little time for reading every day, even if it's only for 15 or so minutes.
- Go through both old and new books, and set some of your favorites around the house. They make cute decorations, and maybe one of the kids will pick one up and start reading!
- Read your child the book version of their favorite movie. If they can read on their own, encourage them to read it!
- Start a book club with friends and family.
- Participate in a book drive and donate old or used books you no longer need. This will help families in need read to their kids.

Dressing for fall Weather

With the change in weather, we never know what we are getting in New England!! But the crisp fall air has arrived! Please remember to dress your child appropriately for outside. All class rooms will continue to go out weather permitting, If you have any questions about the guidelines please stop by the front desk and ask. Also remember to label your child's clothing and belongings in case they get misplaced.
